

Your role in Emergency Management

Under Victorian law, councils are required to assist with local planning and preparation for emergency events.

The result of the emergency planning process should be a coherent and easily understood Municipal Emergency Management Plan (MEMP). The multi-agency Municipal Emergency Management Planning Committee (MEMPC) is responsible for preparing the MEMP.

The MEMP is a multi-agency plan for the municipal district. It is not only a council plan. However, under current arrangements, the plan will come to council for final endorsement and council is responsible for making sure the plan is compliant when audited. All agencies, MEMPC members, the Mayor and councillors, senior council officers and all staff who have emergency management responsibilities should be familiar with the contents of the MEMP.

The pressure of an emergency event can strain relationships, so building solid and strategic local connections can prove to be invaluable before, during and after an emergency event.

It also is important to remember that every person reacts differently to the stress of an emergency situation.

KEY AREAS OF GOVERNANCE

As a council, key areas of governance that relate to emergency management include:

- consideration of the Municipal Emergency Management Plan (MEMP) produced by the multi-agency Municipal Emergency Management Planning Committee (MEMPC)
- ensuring council emergency management planning and business continuity planning are complementary and support good governance and operations
- ensuring health, safety and wellbeing policies within council provide support and pastoral care for senior officers and council staff, including the CEO and councillors, during and after an emergency, and
- other policies that relate to community support during emergencies.

KEY REPORTS

Councillors can expect to see reports to council on:

- proposed legislative and policy changes
- mitigation works that relate to emergency management, including capital works and maintenance
- planning and building issues, some of which may have emergency management and community safety implications
- designations of bushfire Neighbourhood Safer Places (places of last resort)
- provision of emergency management facilities and decisions about critical infrastructure
- detailed planning for recovery following an emergency event
- media protocols relating to emergency response and recovery (including social media)

DURING AN EMERGENCY EVENT

The Mayor and councillors do not have an operational or response role during an emergency. The council's municipal emergency management officers have operational responsibilities and legislative obligations they need to carry out.

Councillors should assist them by steering clear of operational areas, while staying informed of the situation.

The role of the Mayor and councillors in emergency management is quite different. Councillors do not usually play a prominent role in an emergency event.

HANDY HINTS FOR MAYORS

Here are a few tips for mayors to remember during an emergency:

- Do: work in close partnership with the CEO and their key emergency management officers. Mayors and councillors can be a conduit between the community and council.
- Do: seek information from internal council briefings, seek daily briefings if possible.
- Do: provide approved comments to the media if requested. Always check in with the CEO first for the latest information.
- Do: ensure that your media comments relate to representing the views of the community or council services for the community, not operational matters.
- Do: help boost community morale where it may be flagging
- Do: be consistent and follow-up
- Do: be patient. Information on what is happening and the impact of an emergency takes time to assess and verify.
- Do: explain to residents that the council isn't "running" the emergency; it plays a support and facilitation role.

- Don't: enter operational areas. The best place for the mayor and councillors during an emergency is among the community, not in council operational spaces.
- Don't: try to take command of the situation. Emergency management officers have statutory responsibilities they must carry out in an emergency event.
- Don't: bypass existing communication and incident command structures.
- Don't: give answers other than current facts, especially when speaking to the media or residents.

COUNCILLORS' ROLE IN AN EMERGENCY EVENT

Councillors should:

1. Assist the Mayor as requested.
2. "Fly the flag", boost morale and provide comfort to residents affected by an emergency event.
3. Advocate to council, and more broadly as required, on behalf of their constituents.
4. Facilitate communication between council and the community.

MEDIA AND COMMUNICATIONS

If the Mayor is the council's nominated spokesperson, they can play a helpful and prominent role before, during and after an emergency event by providing approved comments and information to the community and media. This should be done in close consultation with the CEO or their delegated communications/emergency management officer.

It is vital that the Mayor always ensures s/he is fully briefed before making media comments. Comments to the media should focus on representing the community's needs and views, not operational matters relating to the emergency.

If the Mayor is the council's nominated spokesperson, other types of information they might deliver could include:

- preparation of advice ahead of a period of high risk
- notification of community meetings and relief and recovery services
- details of any disruptions to council services
- advice regarding the availability of support, counselling or insurance services, including locations of relief and recovery centres
- general public announcements
- details of any public appeal for financial assistance for affected residents.

Any media comments should be drafted in consultation with the council's communications/emergency management staff with the necessary approvals.

Importantly, in a multi-agency event, specific crisis management information should only be issued by the spokesperson nominated by the control agency as it is likely to relate to technicalities of the emergency and may have legal ramifications.

Communication is a two way street. The Mayor may also receive vital information from local residents that should be passed on to the emergency management team via the CEO. This ensures that information coming from the community is collated to enable the best possible decision making.

Accurate information about the emergency and the impact on the community will also be necessary if the Mayor is advocating to other levels of government or other agencies for assistance for the community. Advocacy should be done in consultation with the CEO, who will be gathering information and receiving advice from a range of internal and external sources.

Establishing good working relationships with local media during non-emergency times can prove very helpful during an emergency event.

Relationships with State and Federal Ministers

The Mayor can also play a linking role to other levels of executive government, working with the CEO on this action. However it is important not to take pre-emptive action (and thereby disturb existing procedures).

FOLLOWING AN EMERGENCY EVENT

At the local level, councils have a long-established role in coordinating the provision of relief and recovery services to their communities, and the expectation of this important function is increasing. The recovery period that follows an event can last from months to years.

In the aftermath of an emergency event, the Mayor should monitor recovery activities and maintain their strong engagement with and advocacy for the community.

Moral support and pastoral care

There may be an opportunity for the Mayor and councillors to boost morale or provide comfort to residents affected by an emergency event. This should be done in consultation with the CEO, who will liaise with the emergency management team to determine what would be most helpful.

Public appeal for financial assistance

In consultation with the CEO or their delegate, the Mayor can be the public face of an appeal for financial assistance from the wider public.

The Mayor can act as the focal point for queries from service clubs and community groups that may wish to support an appeal or start their own. This focal point for queries is important because during past emergency events, these organisations have sometimes expended significant amounts of well-intentioned energy gathering goods that are not actually required by the community in crisis.

It is usually far more useful that willing residents/organisations donate financial assistance or time rather than goods.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

What is an emergency? What is emergency management?

An emergency is an event or situation that poses an immediate risk to health, life, property and/or the environment. Emergency management means the organisation and management of resources for dealing with all aspects of emergencies.

All emergencies are different but the same management principles apply, whether the emergency event is relatively minor or very complex.

The Emergency Management Act 2013 establishes Victoria's new governance arrangements for managing emergencies. This Act is being amended in stages as the Emergency Management Act 1986 is repealed.

What is local government's role in emergency management?

Local government plays an important role in emergency management, both in partnership with other levels of government and emergency services, and through its own responsibilities.

The Emergency Management Manual Victoria (EMMV) gives guidance to councils, emergency services and other emergency management agencies about how to implement their obligations under Victorian legislation.

Currently, key emergency management responsibilities of councils stem primarily from Part 4 of the Emergency Management Act 1986, which broadly requires councils to:

- prepare a Municipal Emergency Management Plan (MEMP)
- establish a Municipal Emergency Management Planning Committee (MEMPC) involving various local stakeholder organisations
- facilitate the development and maintenance of the MEMP through the MEMPC
- allow the audit of the MEMP, and
- appoint at least one Municipal Emergency Resource Officer who coordinates the use of council resources needed for responding to and recovering from emergencies.

Note: these responsibilities are expected to change in the near future. Proposed amendments to the Emergency Management Act 2013, which would result in the repeal of the above section of the 1986 Act, were released in mid-2016.

The broad role of local government in emergency management is not always clearly defined, and councils vary in their approach to emergency management planning.

Councils play an important support role in the response to an emergency, but they are not emergency response agencies. Councils have the authority and governance structures, networks and strategic partnerships necessary to support community recovery. Council will have a Municipal Recovery Manager (MRM) and a range of support staff to activate recovery measures as quickly as possible. Planning is crucial to effective recovery in a community affected by an emergency or disaster.
